

A Nashville man was admiring a young lady's hair the other evening: "Miss D., please give me one little curl—just one, won't you?" he pleaded. "Couldn't think of it for a moment," replied the young lady briskly; "why, those curls cost me a dollar apiece."

There are many quaint and primitive customs prevailing in Sweden. Up in the north it is customary to hang the door-key up outside to show that the family is not at home. In Dalecarlia, when a family is away at an outlying pasture, the house is locked up, but a slip of paper is fastened to the door, with a note to tell hungry wayfarers where the key of the house and pantry is concealed.

A man who had recently buried a wife got married again immediately, much to the disgust of his neighbors, who to be revenged, turned out in large numbers and gave him a rousing charivari. The easily consoled husband stood the racket as long as possible, when he came to the door and administered a scathing rebuke to the crowd in this manner: "Ain't you ashamed of yourselves to be making such a noise about my house, when a funeral took place here but four days ago?"

Two negro women met upon the street the other day when the following conversation took place: First woman—"Is you gwine to set up wid the corpse to-night?" Second woman—"No my husband won't let me." "Pshaw! I never seed such a husband as you is got. He never wants to let you see any pleasure."—Woodford County (Ky.) Weekly.

ON "GETTING UP."—Once you have fixed your hour of rising keep it with the more firmness because of the difficulties to be overcome, for this troublesome couch of ours contains in the morning such an amount of magnetic fluid that it keeps us back, I do not say against our will, but with a not unpleasing force which fastens us to the pillow. I acknowledge we are now in the presence of our most terrible enemy, and our pillow is that enemy. When we would quit it in the morning it lulls us with the artful tones of a siren, and caresses us with the utmost tenderness. It seems to say, Why leave me? Are you not well off here? It is so cold out of bed. There is but one way to secure a victory, and that is a prompt decisive act, a military charge, a jump out of bed. Route the enemy by a vigorous sortle, and the enemy is yours. When I meet a man who has the courage to rise at an early hour every morning, I straightway conceive a high idea of the firmness of his character.—Archbishop of Rheims.
